Resumo de Billboard Express

Elle has come to Nashville to become a star. She has what it takes--talent to burn, good looks, financial backing. But her agent and all the label executives want to change everything about her--her hair, her body, her clothes and, most important, her music.

Elle becomes a blond, sings about cookin' for her man and wears tiny shorts and revealing tank tops. Then a chance meeting with an established female songwriter makes Elle realize that she's paying too high a price for success.

"Billboard Express" continues the story that began in "Rock the Boat" by Sigmund Brouwer.
