

New York Times Bestselling Author

"A gifted storyteller and orchestrator of suspense."
—Philadelphia Inquirer

Bernard Cornwell

Author of the Richard Sharpe series

Scoundrel

A Novel of Suspense

Resumo de Scoundrel

Bostonian Paul Shanahan is many things: part-time marine surveyor, smuggler, gunrunner, suspected CIA agent . . . and a full-time scoundrel with ties to nothing and no one except an ex-lover who died years before in a hail of bullets.

Now he's agreed to transport $5 million in gold across the ocean by sailboat, money earmarked by the Irish Republican Army for the purchase of fifty-three Stinger missiles. Shanahan's instincts are telling him there's more to this deal below the surface and that he's not meant to survive after delivery.

But if he can elude British Intelligence, several terrorist organizations, and their most efficient killers--and with only his life left to lose--$5 million might just be enough to get a desperate rogue out of the game for good.

Acesse aqui a versão completa deste livro